FACTS FROM FRANCE.

The Rothschilds propose to start a Paris daily paper of the light boulevardier order.

There are 36,210 municipalities in France. Last year their revenue amounted to 846,983,405 francs, of which 330,910,200 was for the city of Paris.

Coaching seems to be dying a slow death in France, for there is a diminution each year in the number of coaches at the annual muster of the Coaching club in the Place de la Concorde.

A recent sojourner in Paris has remarked that, although the French capital has nothing which corresponds to the slums of London or New York, she has not a single quarter in which the security of the dweller or the passer-by can be considered absolute.

FEW TOOTHED MAMMALS.

Some have none. Others have none in front. They are of the order edentata. Edentates means animals poor in teeth.

The pangolin, suggesting a lizard, is in this particular class.

The aardvarks, earth pigs, of Africa, are unlovely specimens.

The great ant bears, which can hug a jaguar to death, have no teeth at all.

The many sorts of armadillos (little armored people of the Spaniards) have numerous small, peglike teeth.

Very Polite.

An inspector upon his regular rounds rang a bell at the door of a small dwelling, a little tot, acting as maid, opened the door and the following colloquy took place:

"Tell your mother that the water inspector would like to see her."

"Yes, sir. But will you please turn your back?"

"What? Will I please do what?"

"Just turn your back a moment, sir; for I do not want to shut the door in your face."—Lippincott's Magazine.

of troubles that robbed E. H. Wolfe of Bear Grove, Ia., of all usefulness, came when he began taking Electric Bitters. THE COURT WAS BIASED.

So it seemed to the Judge when He Heard His Daughter's Story.

The judge's daughter was perturbed. "Papa," she said, knitting her pretty brow, "I am in doubt as to whether I have kept to the proper form of procedure. In law one can err in so many little technicalities that I am ever fearful. Now, last evening George—"

The judge looked at her so sharply over his glasses that she involuntarily paused.

"I thought you had sent him about his business," he said.

"I did hand down an adverse decision," she answered, "and he declared that he would appeal. However, I convinced him that I was the court of last resort in a case like that and that no appeal would lie from my decision."

"Possibly the court was assuming a little more power than rightfully belongs to it," said the judge thoughtfully. "But let that pass. What did he do then?"

"He filed a petition for a rehearing," the usual course," said the judge.

"But it is usually nothing but a mere formality."

"So I thought," returned the girl, "and I was prepared to deny it without argument, but the facts set forth in his petition were sufficient to make me hesitate and wonder whether his case had really been properly presented at the first trial."

"Upon what grounds did he make the application?" asked the judge, scowling.

"Well," she replied, blushing a little, "you see he proposed by letter, and his contention was that the case was of that peculiar character that cannot be properly presented by briefs, but demands oral arguments. The fact that the latter had been omitted, he held, should be held to be an error, and the point was such a novel one that I consented to let him argue it. Then his argument was so forceful that I granted his petition and consented to hear the whole case again. Do you think—"

"I think," said the judge, "that the court favors the plaintiff."—Chicago Post.

Fly Paper Traps a Burglar.

Hearing a man stirring about her bedroom early in the morning, Mrs. Mary Frederick of Scranton, Pa., wanted to know who was there. The fellow decamped, taking with him a piece of fly paper, which he set upon a scrambling through a window, and leaving behind a hat, in which appeared Andrew McGerrin's name. The police arrested McGerrin in bed, and a look at his pants found many dead flies held there by the gummy paper, which, however, had been torn away.

BURNED BABY IN A MANGER

Fiendish Play of Two Long Island Children

WERE "EXPERIMENTING"

Wanted to See Which Would Burn First, Hay or Baby—Told Parents Victim Was in Woods, Which Were Searched for Two Days.

Startling details of an amazing child murder, fiendish and self confessedly deliberate, but unpunishable because, in the eyes of the law, the infant perpetrators cannot distinguish between right and wrong, came to light recently at Riverhead, N. Y.

The childish motive behind the burning to death of two-year-old Julian Beck by his playmates, Frank and Anthony White, aged four and six years respectively, as admitted by the youngsters themselves, was to determine whether the baby or the hay in the manger of the White barn would burn first. Charred bones of the baby were discovered in the ruins of the barn two days after the fire, but it was not until two weeks later that the awful details of the infanticide were worked out of the frightened children.

For two days following the fire Mr. and Mrs. John Beck, parents of the victim, with hundreds of neighbors, searched the woods in the neighborhood for the little fellow, the White boys insisting, when the fire was discovered, that the Beck boy was seen hurrying into the thicket.

The frantic mother shrieked and wept like a maniac during the search, and when she was told that the charred bones of her infant were discovered in the debris she collapsed.

The horrible details of the fire and its fiendish work are best told by Tony White, the elder of the lads who burned their baby playmate.

"Julian Beck and Frank, my little brother," said Tony, "were playing out in papa's barn, when I went out with them. We all thought that it would be nice to see the hay burn, and I went into the house and climbed upon a chair and stole a handful of matches from the mantelpiece, and ran back to the barn, where Frank and Julie were waiting."

"I told Frank that I didn't know which would burn first, the hay or Julie, if we put both in the feed box. 'Let's see,' said Frank, and as the baby did not kick we lifted him upon a soap box and then tumbled him into the manger where the horses eat their oats. First the baby hollered and then he

"PRETTY SOON THERE WAS A BIG FIRE," didn't. Me and Frank then threw a lot of hay into the manger, covering the baby all over. I struck a match and threw it in the place where the baby was, and pretty soon there was a big fire. It got bigger and bigger all the time."

"Mamma, mamma, papa, papa," cried Julie, but by that time the fire was so big that we could not get Julie out. The hay burned first, but Julie burned too. My papa and Julie's papa and mamma and Mr. Fanning and lots of other people came running to the barn and tried to put out the fire, but they couldn't. Gee, but it was a big fire. It was the biggest fire I ever saw. Me and Frank ran into the woods, and Julie's mamma ran after us and asked us where the baby was. We were afraid to tell her, and we said that he was up in the woods. The fire kept on going and we watched it nearly all night. Before we went to bed there was lots of people out from the town and from everywhere, and there was no more barn left."

"The first one we told about how the fire started and that baby Julie was in the barn and burned up and not out in the woods, where the people were all looking for him, was my brother Charlie. Charlie told us that we would get the dinkens and maybe have to go to that big jail in town. It was Charlie who told papa, and then we got whipped good and hard."

HOUSEHOLD CARES

Tax the Women of Barre the Same as Elsewhere.

Hard to attend to household duties. With a constantly aching back. A woman should not have a bad back. And she wouldn't if the kidneys were well.

Doan's Kidney Pills make well kidneys.

Here is a Barre woman who endorses this claim:

Mrs. M. Gabel, 31 Brooklyn street, Barre, Vt., says: "I suffered terribly for two or three years with severe pains across my back and up my side. I had headaches and spells of dizziness and a distressing kidney weakness that compelled me to rise often during the night and thus disturbed my rest. The doctors gave me medicines but I received little benefit until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills sold by E. A. Drown, the druggist. It was only a few days before I could see that they were helping me. The improvement was gradual and as I kept on taking the remedy I became better in every way. My kidneys became normal in action. I can honestly say that I never found anything that proved of such great benefit as Doan's Kidney Pills."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

A REFRIGERATOR.

A Wall Arrangement and Some Advantages Claimed For It.

A refrigerator when built in as part of a house may be made a great convenience as well as an ornamental object. The ordinary box refrigerator is often in the way and a serious inconvenience. Architectural arrangements may place it so far out of the way that many steps have to be taken, or it may have to be set in a sunny position or near a stove. Built into the pantry or kitchen or even on the piazza it may be handy, roomy, neat and clean at all times.

The wall arrangement shown in the cut consists of three thicknesses of seven-eighths inch sheathing, two of paper and one dead air space. The inside may be thirty inches wide in front and twenty-four deep. Each compartment should have a solid door in front, with firm hinges and a strong lever lock. The entire front may be made very ornamental, especially if brass hinges of an ornamental sort are used. Polished lock to correspond and polished heavy glass in each door. The upper or ice compartment is lined with galvanized iron sheeting. A one inch lead pipe from the ice chest runs down to the sewer pipe or other means of drainage, of course being trapped below the refrigerator, as shown. The ice compartment also has a door outside the building. By filling the ice compartment through a door outside the house is obviated, concludes a writer in American Cultivator.

RAPE FOR FEED.

As a Soiling Crop and For Pasture, May Be Sown Late.

As a green feed for soiling—that is, cutting and feeding green—or for pasture rape stands unequalled among crops suitable for swine. It should be sown in rows two feet apart on stubble, fallow or well rotted sod at the rate of three pounds per acre. It may be sown any time, as long as there remain six weeks of growing weather before severe frosts are to be expected. If intended to be pastured the pigs should be turned in before the rape comes up to the top of their shoulders. No greater area should be given than they are likely to keep down to that height or lower. If not pastured or cut too close to the ground it will keep on growing as long as the growing season lasts. Greater returns may be expected from soiling than from pasturing a given area. Feeding pigs will generally make more rapid gains when it is being fed to them in moderate quantities in pens than when at pasture on it. Breeding stock are likely to do better when they can use it as pasture. Feeding pigs receiving all the rape they will eat on rape pasture should receive somewhat less meal than they would if in their pens. From one-third to five-sixths of the regular ration should be fed; the more rapid the gain desired, of course, the heavier the ration.—J. H. Grisdale, Canada.

Not Gently.

"Is your husband a bibliomaniac?" asked Mrs. Olden as she was being permitted to view the treasures in the library of the new neighbors.

"Mercy sakes, no!" replied Mrs. Packerham. "He never bibles a bit. Oh, of course, I don't say that he wouldn't take a little at his meals if the rest was done, but that's as far as he ever goes in that kind of things."—Chicago Record-Herald.
